

Advanced Roulette Strategies

by Gregory Goode

I have always believed that gambling is an acceptable pass time and not contrary to spiritual practice or good moral conduct. However like anything, gambling should be approached with moderation. Never gamble what you can't afford to lose especially if you have people depending on you. Unsuccessful gambling behavior is caused by character flaws such as impatience, greed and ignorance. By improving your character you will avoid all the pitfalls of bad gambling. If you are interested in improving your character check out my free ebook: "Inner Medicine"

Is a Successful Roulette Strategy Possible?

The offline/real world game of roulette is not random, it is chaotic. Randomness means no order, no pattern. Chaotic means no perceived or recognised order or pattern. There is a big difference between these 2 states. The Casino has a 1 in 38 advantage. The player must optimize every variable in order to overthrow this house advantage.

Utilising Muscle Memory

When the human body performs an action over and over again a "muscle memory" begins to form. This means that very close to the same level of forces are used again and again. The croupier who spins the wheel time after time develops a "signature" which, when recognized, can be used to help predict the rough sector of the wheel where the ball will land. Of course this signature force has to be calculated from where the ball last fell. If other factors such as interruptions etc occur on a spin, then one should not gamble on that spin, or one should bet low. If the spin is judged particularly "regular", then one bets higher.

The player must first discover the signature by tracking the relationship between where the ball last was and where it then lands. It is not necessary to bet at this stage, or one bets low.

A powerful and difficult preparatory method is to memorise the sequence of numbers that form the roulette wheel. One should memorise them forward and backwards from any point on the wheel. Their sequence should be studied as much as possible. When this is done the player can more easily perceive and act upon the croupier signature. The player will look more natural and will be able to utilise far more of his mental resources for the calculation of how much to wager on each spin etc.

The Power of Subliminals

The theory is that the human croupier has far more unconscious control over where the ball lands than they consciously think possible. The player may communicate with the croupiers unconscious subliminally-that is without the conscious knowledge of the croupier, to the advantage of the player. Firstly one should be generally likable to the croupier in order to establish at least a mild rapport. Basically this means being polite and respectful to the croupier. Secondly one should be relaxed and appear to be relaxed and confident. By appearing like a winner you will make it seem and so become more natural and likely for you to win. Thirdly the player's clothing may be used to relay a subliminal message to the croupier. For example a small golden badge of a "winners cup"-hardly noticeable-may link you to the idea of "winner" in the croupier's mind, subliminally helping things go in your favor. Similarly your clothing can conceal other messages such as "the ball lands on more red numbers" or more odd, higher, lower or particular numbers. The message can be very small, hidden in a pattern or even written in ultraviolet. Rest assured that the unconscious can pick up messages that the conscious mind cannot perceive. It is advised that you independently study the use of subliminals to give you greater confidence and skill in their usage.
